

The fastest, easiest way to deliver financial literacy education to all library users

Financial literacy is a critical tool for economic empowerment. Libraries can help reduce disparities in financial literacy education by offering FinancialFit, a curated collection of approachable, unbiased lessons on personal finance.

Add FinancialFit to your library collection.

Scan the code to request a free trial.

| Feature | Benefit |
|--|--|
| Lessons cover a wide range of topics, including budgeting, building credit, managing debt, understanding taxes and more. | Libraries can offer financial literacy programming without risking patron confidentiality or requiring librarians to possess personal finance expertise. |
| Lessons contain short scenarios, videos, quizzes and downloadable worksheets. | Interactive learning improves engagement, increases retention, and allows learners to apply knowledge in a risk-free environment. |
| Each lesson can be completed in under five minutes. | Shorter, focused lessons are easier to digest and review. |
| Each lesson assumes no prior knowledge. | All learners — no matter their financial situation or understanding of personal finance — can make informed decisions and achieve their goals. |
| Personal dashboard tracks a learner's in-progress and completed microlessons. | Learners can move through course topics at their own pace. |
| Mobile-first user experience offers bright, modern design and easy-to-identify content categories. | Learners can quickly access personal finance content on the go. |
| Lessons are supplemented with a glossary of more than 750 financial terms. | Users can quickly look up any unfamiliar terms as they progress through the lessons. |