

Making a Difference

4 Ways Librarians Can Help College-Bound Students Succeed

START

01. Give them a head start

Colleges and universities around the world use discovery services to provide a single point of entry for library resources. Prepare your students by introducing them to the services they'll use in college.

02. Show them the way

Make finding information easier with the intuitive, user-friendly search experience discovery provides. Bring together your entire collection — magazines, journal articles, books and e-books — by providing a single search box and a single result list.

03. Open the door to information literacy

Teach students to differentiate trusted sources from those found on the open web and to evaluate which resources best support their research objectives.

04. Help them reach the finish line

Your library's e-resources support school curriculum and the integration of information and communication technologies. Give students the knowledge and skills they need to compete in a global society.
