

LET'S BROADBAND TOGETHER

Let's Demand Better Internet Service!

Join our people-powered research study to transform internet service in the U.S.

All of us rely on broadband internet every day. And the global pandemic made access to high-speed affordable internet even more vital for our jobs, education, healthcare, and getting essentials shipped to our homes. But the truth is, millions of us don't have access to internet service. And for those of us who do, it's often unreliable or too expensive.

We Need Your Help

Together, we have the opportunity to change this broken marketplace. Consumer Reports, along with a coalition of national and regional organizations, have launched the 'Let's Broadband Together' campaign — a coalition dedicated to ensuring all of us have affordable, accessible high-speed internet.

You can play a critical role in this effort by telling us about your internet service — what you pay and how reliable it is.

You'll be part of a first-of-a-kind study of broadband across the nation that will determine if we're all getting what we're paying for. The survey takes seven minutes of your time and will help us advocate for more equitable and fair broadband internet for everyone.

broadbandtogether.org

We hope you'll join us!

By participating in this study you will get early access to findings from the research and resources to help improve your broadband internet, along with many other perks along the way. Your participation will remain confidential and your information will be safely secured.